

Question: The Light Beings offered the following information without the subject being brought up in a private reading:

Light Beings: There is much going on with the shifts that are happening on your planet. As you are well aware your government is making some radical moves behind the scenes to counteract some of the things that Trump is trying to bring into play. There are many at the top of the government that are very concerned for the welfare of the people and what may happen if Trump is actually inaugurated. You may see much more discontent and upheaval in the near future within the ranks. Many are siding with Trump because they believe it will benefit them in some way, but many are simply working behind the scenes to make sure he does not get the power he so wants. Some of the people he has nominated for his cabinet may appear to be in his corner and willing to do his bidding, but that is not actually what will happen. After they are in office they will begin to join forces with others that feel he is not making wise decisions, and there will be a lot of conflict although the general public may not be as aware of it at his time. There are many uncertainties and it is possible he will not finish out his term.

There is a much more active grassroots movement in many different areas including healthcare and the environment. Those groups are going to become much more active with many more joining forces when they begin to see the backward directions the powers want to take. You are going to see some very strong leaders in those groups surface, and many that have not really thought much about the possibility of real change will begin to see possibility and join with the ranks of those that truly want to see the disappearance of the separativeness that is so pervasive now. It will be time when the light and the dark are going to be much farther apart in ideologies, and you are going to also see a reverting back to some of the original thoughts of the founding fathers of your country. It will not be an easy time for many' and the economic disparity is going to be even greater before it can right itself, but it will begin to see some progress in that area within the next two years.

You are also going to see a much needed emphasis from many of the present healthcare workers on prevention instead of treatment after the fact. It will be subtle at first, but there will be some very strong supporters in the medical world of the changes, and as the government struggles to find a solution they will find that the unrest and disappointment in their ability to offer a solution to the impossible situation with the system at present is going to bring many dissenters who bring better solutions to the forefront. There will begin to be a movement due to the open discussions by many in the health field within the fast food industry, and you will begin to see some changes in what is being served as well as completely new food chains with a much healthier menu at a fair price. You are also going to see much dissent within the food chains with the employees lamenting both wages and how the companies are run. No longer will they become the silent majority, but will find some leaders that will organize and help them speak out for their needs, and change will be made for the industry to survive. All of this will not happen in the next couple of years, but you are going to see the beginnings of such changes gradually.

The environment is in great need of attention and, again, in next few years within the government there will be much dissent, and a struggle for the status quo within the ranks, but several natural disasters will awaken those in denial to the fact that something is definitely amiss and solutions will begin to emerge.
